IF EVER, it is respectfully remarked, an assemblage of Pictures were brought before the Public, indisputably genuine, valuable for variety and merit, and of unsullied purity, it is the selection enumerated in this catalogue.

They were collected by the GREFFIERS FAGEL during a period of more than a century, under the combined advantages of their acknowledged taste and judgement; were purchased by them, in Holland and Flanders, countries abounding in rich works of art: and admired equally by the intelligent and unlearned, they stood celebrated at the HAGUE as a selection of the first importance.

In preparing the Catalogue for their Sale in London, the gratifying reflection naturally arises, that in all the consequences issuing out of the recent events on the Continent, which disturbed the social compact of Nations, scattered persons and dispersed property; cruelly and sacrilegiously, if the term may be used, tearing away the most valuable works of genius from the very places they were originally executed to adorn: this Country has to boast, that no one collection in her possession has been the plunder of her fleets or armies.

All the variety of interesting performances which have been introduced among us, have been brought over for the choice of British

British taste and liberality—free-will offerings : and these very works of incomparable merit, are an additional instance, and may rank foremost in the schedule of perfection.

Every expression should be admitted by the candid mind, according to the sense intended to be conveyed, and in that just commendation of their excellence, it is by no means designed, what indeed would be madness in the attempt, to derogate from the acknowledged reputation of the great and masterly schools of Italy, in the Perfection of Leonardi da Vinci, Michael Agnola Buonaroti, Raphael, Titian, Correggio, or the Caracci !

But in forming an Assemblage of pictures, it should be recollected (for no man forms a collection merely for his own gratification) that the highest Regions of Poetry and Sublimity are not suited to every observer. The comparatively few only, can feel the extreme perfection of taste, in an accurate discrimination in those early Masters of the clear light of the art from the false glare, while Pictures executed from the standard of universal life, in general occurrences apply to every one's conception. The ranks and degrees of human order and existence, their pursuits, their passions, their humours and their excellence are perpetually passing in review : and on this principle works of human ingenuity which embrace all nature, not only "catch" at the moment, "the living manners as they rise," but like history, become faithful records of local situations, past habits and appearances, and former transactions; and what is a well chosen selection displayed to advantage, but “ walls,” as Sir Joshua Reynolds happily expressed, “ hung round with thoughts”—a collection of the best authors, whose entertaining or instructive works lie open before us as the finest passages.

Accordant with such sentiments, it may surely be asked without presumption, who would be without pictures, who has the power of purchasing? with such a beautiful and perfect assemblage before them of the Dutch and Flemish Schools as these of the GREFFIERS FAGEL, who will not be eager to select, who will not avail themselves of the favorable opportunity that now offers?
